

Importance Of Education In Society

Dr. Rajni Kumari, Assistant Professor (Political Science)
SH. L.N. Hindu College, Rohtak
E.mail.: gahlawat.rajnikumari@gmail.com

Abstract: The present research paper explains the importance of Education in the society regarding prevention of breeding of illiteracy and Gender inequality, maintenance of better law and order, increase of high self esteem, development of society, increase of wealth, improvement of health and hygiene. The present work shows that Education can be achieved, not received and brings real empowerment and it is a right path to reach to the destination. Education is a powerful weapon. So, all should be educated, good achiever and must come to earn without going away from it.

Key words: Education, Society, Empowerment, Weapon, Illiteracy

Introduction

The educational psychology in a society is primarily responsible for its development and success. A society behaves depending on the status of education and literacy of its individuals. A society which realizes the importance of schools for its children and has good schools and educational institutions backed by dedicated faculty is on the right path towards development. Education is a best friend goes life long, makes a person a responsible citizen, safeguards the liberty of a person, brings an opportunity for one's development with security and gives everyone a dignity. Education enables a person to serve his nation by developing a strong rooted society and it is all problems' solution which serves best to every generation. The issues related to Population, unemployment or pollution can be solved through education. Education is the only tool, to be wise from fool and creates difference between wise and fool. Education is ever priceless, it serves best to human race. Education is much precious than gold, it is for both young and old.

The world will go to devastation, if we don't focus on education. So, it is must to all. Education is the only tool to win over all the violence and it is smart enough to change the human mind positively. Education is a way to success in life and makes a door to bright future. Education is one of the birth rights of all. Educated citizen brings the development in the nation. Education brings sweetness, despite its bitterness. Being involved in education dedicatedly is a good meditation for years. Education is a way to unlimited learning, key to the door of all the dreams and connects people together at right path. Education fills the empty mind with good things and itself is free of all the forces, age, sex, cast, religion, and region. Education has benefits a lot to fills mind with positive thought i.e. replaces empty mind with positive thoughts and forces a person to think positive and do right deeds. Education is the best way to reform people and makes children's world better. Education changes your bad today into good tomorrow and makes a society free of superstitions and taboos. Education takes a person out of the social issues. Education brings opportunities of unlimited learning, affinity and kills differences in the society and it is the place where learning begins but ends nowhere. Education teaches us how to achieve success. Education is a life shaper which turns the filthy mind into open mind, opens up the door to unlimited learning, shapes people's life, brings a person much closer to the nature and makes a person able to live in reality. Food is required to grow your body but good education is required to grow your mind. Girls or boys; male or female, all have equal rights to education. Education can be achieved, not received and brings real empowerment and it is a right path to reach to the destination. Education is a powerful weapon. So, all should be educated, good achiever and must come to earn without going away from it.

Advantages of Education in Society

An educated society can look after the needs of its children, students, youth as well as and elders and strive for development; taking everybody in account. A society which is educated nurtures the younger generation in a much better way than the uneducated society, so that they grow up to become content and happy individuals; contributing to the nation's growth. An uneducated society, on the other hand has many odds on its side than the evens. A society that constitutes of uneducated and illiterate people cannot provide basic amenities for itself; neither it has the vision to do so. The individuals in such societies don't have the perception of development, nor do they strive for it; living a deprived and rather depressed life.

These societies have poor state of health, hygiene, economy and not to mention poor education; latter being the root cause behind all their issues. Such societies are unable to provide necessary education to the individuals and youths, pushing them towards criminal activities to fend for the needs of themselves and their families. The young are malnourished, deprived and forced into labor; sealing their own fate as well as the fate of the society.

Illiteracy breeds Illiteracy

An educated society makes sure that its younger generation is also educated while an illiterate society breeds illiterate generations, who struggle in life even to meet their basic needs of food and health. Illiterate parents are least likely to promote education to their wards, so pushing them towards deprivation and labor. A literate society on the other hand, makes sure that its children too are educated and provides necessary infrastructure and logistics for it.

Development of Society

An educated society is either developed or is moving towards development. It moves steadily towards economic, social and infrastructural development; providing all of its members, the financial, social and infrastructural needs. Because its people are educated, they are employed and fearless to adapting to any scientific and technological advancement. They have a vision of development and high levels of per capita income, leading to better living standards and quality of life. An uneducated society on the other hand is underdeveloped and its per capita income is extremely low, which reflects poor living conditions and hence poor state of basic amenities. The average income earned by the individuals is low due to their low productivity, owing to their illiteracy. Therefore, the only hope of the development of a society lies in the education of its people.

Better Law and Order

An educated society can collectively fend for the needs of its members, resulting in happy and content individuals and hence a happy and content society. An educated society means, its members are gainfully employed and can very well look after the needs of themselves and their families. They don't have to; neither, they need to break the law in order to fend for their needs. The individuals stay in order and so does the society. An uneducated society on the other hand breeds a discontent and unhappy individual, who has the power of nothing else but to destroy. An uneducated individual is more likely to take to criminal activities like-theft, robbery etc, in order to meet his and his family's daily requirements of food and money; ultimately leading to poor law and order condition of the society. This doesn't mean that every uneducated person is a criminal but it is also true that nearly three quarters of the criminals are uneducated.

Wealth and Abundance

An educated society is a wealthy society which provides for the social and financial needs of its members. The members are gainfully employed in business or in profession and are wealthy enough to sustain their needs; living a happy and content life. They have the access to resources and are skilled enough to use them for their financial and social development. They understand that only the society which is educated can stay together and has an abundance of opportunities, facilities and amenities. An uneducated society on the other hand is a deprived society, whose members have to struggle even to gain a full square meal each day. A society that is not educated, cannot implement new technology or bring social or political changes; necessary for sustainable development. Poverty breeds in such societies, where not only children but also adults remain deprived and malnourished.

High Self Esteem

Self esteem of an individual depends on how he/she looks after his/her family, what they contribute to the society, their social status, standard of living and various other similar factors. It can therefore be said that a literate society is a group of people with high self esteem and access to good facilities and better living environment. People in an uneducated society; however, don't enjoy that self esteem and always look down upon themselves and as well as the society. They suffer from a sense of inferiority and insecurity, not to mention a low self esteem.

Gender Equality

An educated society does not discriminate between genders and provides equal opportunities to all. Women in an educated society are gainfully employed, sustaining their families and improving their financial and social status. An educated society very well understands the need to be gender neutral and its significance in social and economical development. An illiterate society lacks any such vision and is completely aloof of the benefits of gender equality. Such societies treat women as domestic workers; whose only job is to cook food and look for petty house hold works. A society that doesn't take every gender into consideration, has limited economical as well as social development.

Health And Hygiene

An educated society has a way better state of health and hygiene than an illiterate society. Educated individuals are well aware of the threats to their lives and know how to tackle them. Literacy is the weapon they use to analyze, understand and finally subdue the threats; ensuring better health and hygiene for themselves as well as their families. They have knowledge of medical advancements across the world and are bold enough to demand the same from authorities. Contrastingly, an illiterate society lacks the vision to identify the health hazards or sometimes knowingly live in a hazardous and unhygienic environment; as they are left with no option owing to their poverty and poor social status. An uneducated society doesn't understand the difference between good and bad hygiene, neither it demands better medical facilities.

Better Political State

A literate society makes way for a better political setup as they understand what's good and bad for them and also for the nation's development. Educated individuals are more likely to take wise and unbiased decisions while choosing their political representatives. They are the most unlikely to believe in false promises and get carried away by unrealistic goals. They know who is real and fake and can clearly visualize the differences.

Conclusion

Proper and good education is very important for all of us. It facilitates quality learning all through the life among people of any age group, caste, creed, religion and region. It is the process of achieving knowledge, values, skills, beliefs, and moral habits. There is a need to make people from all financial and social backgrounds, aware of the significance of education and the impacts it brings in their lives. Education is a ladder to success and prosperity in life. It breaks free the soul of an individual from the chains of poverty and illiteracy; making him/her able enough to carve his/her own path to success. Education is as much necessary for the affluent as it is for the poor. It is indeed something which has multiple desirable outcomes on its pursuer, including – better confidence, better personality, more social acceptability, etc. Education is also an essential requirement for a nation to progress economically and socially. An illiterate society on the other hand, finds it difficult to make decisions, especially when it comes to choosing the right political leadership. It is most likely to be carried away on the pretexts of false promises and on the basis of religion, culture, caste or language; rather than development. An illiterate voter doesn't votes for the society's development, he rather commits to the petty gains those were promised in return.

References:

1. Dewey, John (1944) [1916]. Democracy and Education. The Free Press. pp. 1–4. ISBN 978-0-684-83631-7.
2. Article 13 of the United Nations' 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights recognizes a universal right to education. ICESCR, Article 13.1
3. May, S.; Aikman, S. (2003). "Indigenous Education: Addressing Current Issues and Developments". Comparative Education. 39 (2):13945. doi:10.1080/03050060302549. JSTOR 3099875.
4. Rogoff, Barbara; Callanan, Maureen; Gutiérrez, Kris D.; Erickson, Frederick (2016). "The Organization of Informal Learning". Review of Research in Education. 40: 356–401. doi:10.3102/0091732X16680994.
5. Smolen, Paul; Zhang, Yili; Byrne, John H. (25 January 2016). "The right time to learn: mechanisms and optimization of spaced learning". Nature Reviews Neuroscience. 17 (2): 77–88. doi:10.1038/nrn.2015.18. PMC 5126970. PMID 26806627.

6. Parry, M. (2010). "Such a Deal? Maybe Not. Online learning can cost more than traditional education". The Chronicle of Higher Education. 57 (11).
7. "School Governance, Assessments and Accountability" (PDF). Programme for International Student Assessment. OECD. 2013. Retrieved 25 June 2017.
8. Mommsen, Peter (Winter 2019). "The Community of Education". Plough Quarterly.
9. Eric A. Hanushek (2005). Economic outcomes and school quality. International Institute for Educational Planning. ISBN 978-92-803-1279-9. Retrieved 21 October 2011.
10. "Why a high IQ doesn't mean you're smart". Yale School of Management. 1 November 2009. Retrieved 6 October 2018.
11. Samuel Bowles; Herbert Gintis (18 October 2011). Schooling In Capitalist America: Educational Reform and the Contradictions of Economic Life. Haymarket Books. ISBN 978-1-60846-131-8. Retrieved 21 October 2011.
12. Caplan, Bryan (2018). The Case against Education: Why the Education System Is a Waste of Time and Money (PDF). Princeton University Press. p. 416. ISBN 978-0691196459.