Abstract:

The procedure of global selection, succession and career planning has become critical to the success of global enterprise transformation. And More so as the globalization evolves from being the latest corporate buzzword to a basic economic reality in consulting organizations, expatriation and repatriation is a way of life, as these organizations survive and prosper on the revenues that are generated by their consultants on site. In recent years, the rules and methods of expatriate management has changed completely and in today's scenario, the companies can no longer afford to be lackadaisical in their efforts to select and develop as the Indian companies continue to expand across the border at a rapid rate and face stiff competition from global giants, they're also incurring millions of dollars in costs as a result of failures attributable to poor expatriate assignments.

As the globalization has evolved from being the latest corporate buzzword to a basic economic reality, more and more organizations today, realize that they need managers with expertise and skills that translate well to the international arena. Some industry commentators call the Human Resources function the last bastion of bureaucracy. Traditionally, the role of the Human Resource professional in many organizations has been to serve as the systematizing, policing arm of executive management.

Keywords: executive management, VSAT, expatriate assignments, WLL, VoIP services.

Introduction:

Human Resources are the wealth of an organization which can help in achieving its goals. The values, ethics, beliefs of the individuals working in an organization also form a part of human resources. All the activities of an organization are executed and completed in a team spirit by the persons who make up an organization. Thus, it is the people or the human beings in the organization who form a significant resource of organization. In today's modern business world every organization realizes the need and important of competent and skilled manpower and the necessity of procurement and retaining such employees for the success of organization among its competitors

Steps In The Organization Of A Development Programme

The following are the important steps in the organization of a management development programme.

Analysis Of Organizational Development Needs:

After deciding to launch a management development programme close and critical examination of the present and future development need of the organization has to be made. We should know how many and what type of managers are required to meet the present and future requirements.

A comparison of the existing talent with those that are required to meet the projected need will help the top management to take a policy decision as to whether it wishes to fulfill those positions from within the organization or from outside sources.

Appraisal Of Present Management Talents:

In order to make the above suggested comparison, a qualitative assessment of the existing executive talent should be made an estimate of their potentials for their development should be added to that. Only then can it will be compared with the projected required talents.

Inventory Of Management Manpower:

This is prepared to have a complete set of information about each executive in each position. For each member of the executive team, a card is prepared to listing such data as name, age, length of service, education, work experience, health record, psychological test result and performance appraisal data etc. the selections of individuals for a management development programme is made on the basis of the kind of background they possess such information, when analyzed. Discloses the strengths as well as weaknesses or deficiencies of managers in certain functions relating to the future needs of the organizations.

PLANNING OF INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME:

Guided by the results of the performance appraisal that indicates the strengths and weaknesses of each of the executive, this activity of planning of individual development programme can be performed.

ESTABLISHING OF DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME:

It is the duty of the HR department to establish the developmental opportunities. The Hr department Has to identify the existing level of skills, knowledge etc., of various executive and compare them with their respective job requirements. EMPLOYEE TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT

An Effective Training Program

The quality of employees and their development through training and education are major factors in determining long-term profitability of a small business. Hiring and keeping good employees is the key to the first factor. (Hiring has been discussed in the first section and retaining employees will be discussed in the third section.) If you hire and keep good employees, it is good policy to invest in the development of their skills, so they can increase their productivity.

Training often is considered for new employees only. This is a mistake because ongoing training for current employees helps them adjust to rapidly changing job requirements.

Purpose of Training and Development

Reasons for emphasizing the growth and development of personnel include

- Creating a pool of readily available and adequate replacements for personnel who may leave or move up in the organization.
- Enhancing the company's ability to adopt and use advances in technology because of a sufficiently knowledgeable staff.
- Building a more efficient, effective and highly motivated team, which enhances the company's competitive position and improves employee morale.
- Ensuring adequate human resources for expansion into new programs.

Research has shown specific benefits that a small business receives from training and developing its workers, including:

- Increased productivity.
- Reduced employee turnover.
- Increased efficiency resulting in financial gains.
- Decreased need for supervision.

Employees frequently develop a greater sense of self-worth, dignity and well-being as they become more valuable to the firm and to society. Generally they will receive a greater share of the material gains that result from their increased productivity. These factors give them a sense of satisfaction through the achievement of personal and company goals.

The Training Process

The model in Chart 1 traces the steps necessary in the training process.

Chart 1 - Steps in the Training Process

Organizational Objectives

Firms that plan their training process are more successful than those that do not. Most business owners want to succeed, but do not engage in training designs that promise to improve their chances of success. Why? The five reasons most often identified are.

- Time - Small businesses managers find that time demands do not allow them to train employees.
- Getting started - Most small business managers have not practiced training employees. The training process is unfamiliar.
- Broad expertise - Managers tend to have broad expertise rather than the specialized skills needed for training and development activities.
- Lack of trust and openness — Many managers prefer to keep information to themselves. By doing so they keep information from subordinates and others who could be useful in the training and development process.
- Skepticism as to the value of the training — Some small business owners believe the future cannot be predicted or controlled and their efforts, therefore, are best centered on current activities ~ i.e., making money today.

A well-conceived training program can help your firm succeed. A program structured with the company's strategy and objectives in mind has a high probability of improving productivity and other goals that are set in the training mission.

Identifying Training Needs

Training needs can be assessed by analyzing three major human resource areas: the organization as a whole, the job characteristics and the needs of the individuals. This analysis will provide answers to the following questions:

- Where is training needed?
- What specifically must an employee learn in order to be more productive?
- Who needs to be trained?

Selection of Trainees

Once you have decided what training is necessary and where it is needed, the next decision is who should be trained? For a small business, this question is crucial. Training an employee is expensive, especially when he or she leaves your firm for a better job. Therefore, it is important to carefully select who will be trained.

Training Goals

The goals of the training program should relate directly to the needs determined by the assessment process outlined above. Course objectives should clearly state what behavior or skill will be changed as a result of the training and should relate to the mission and strategic plan of the company.

Training Methods

There are two broad types of training available to small businesses: on-the-job and off-the-job techniques. On-the-job training is delivered to employees while they perform their regular jobs. In this way, they do not lose time while they are learning. After a plan is developed for what should be taught, employees should be informed of the details. A timetable should be established with periodic evaluations to inform employees about their progress. On-the-job techniques include orientations, job instruction training, apprenticeships, internships and assistantships, job rotation and coaching.

Off-the-job techniques include lectures, special study, films, television conferences or discussions, case studies, role playing, simulation, programmed instruction and laboratory training. Most of these techniques can be used by small businesses although, some may be too costly.

Training Administration

Having planned the training program properly, you must now administer the training to the selected employees. It is important to follow through to make sure the goals are being met. Questions to consider before training begins include

- ! Location.
- ! Facilities.
- ! Accessibility.
- ! Comfort.
- ! Equipment.
- ! Timing.

Careful attention to these operational details will contribute to the success of the training program. An effective training program administrator should follow these steps:

- ! Define the organizational objectives.
- ! Determine the needs of the training program.
- ! Define training goals.
- ! Develop training methods.
- ! Decide whom to train.
- ! Decide who should do the training.
- ! Administer the training.
- ! Evaluate the training program.

Following these steps will help an administrator develop an effective training program to ensure that the firm keeps qualified employees who are productive, happy workers. This will contribute positively to the bottom line.

Evaluation of Training

Training should be evaluated several times during the process. Determine these milestones when you develop the training. Employees should be evaluated by comparing their newly acquired skills.

- Don't tell only good things

- Allow employee an opportunity to provide you, the owner, with information question and suggestion. In this way, communication are two way.

Fairness

Fairness ranges from consistency in personnel actions and fair market practices to adherence to the various laws governing the workplace. The concept of due process requires that a small business follow its own rules and policies.

The key to healthy work relations is managing communications within the firm. Most of the communication will flow as orders and instructions to employees. Nevertheless, communicating (and honesty and fairness) is a two-way process. It is difficult for employees to be intelligent and enthusiastic team workers if they do not know the reasons behind orders and instructions. Perhaps even more important is giving employees the opportunity to contribute ideas and opinions before the manager-owner makes a decision. This adds dignity and meaning to the job in the eyes of most employees and their families.

Some practical human relations techniques that stimulate two-way communications include

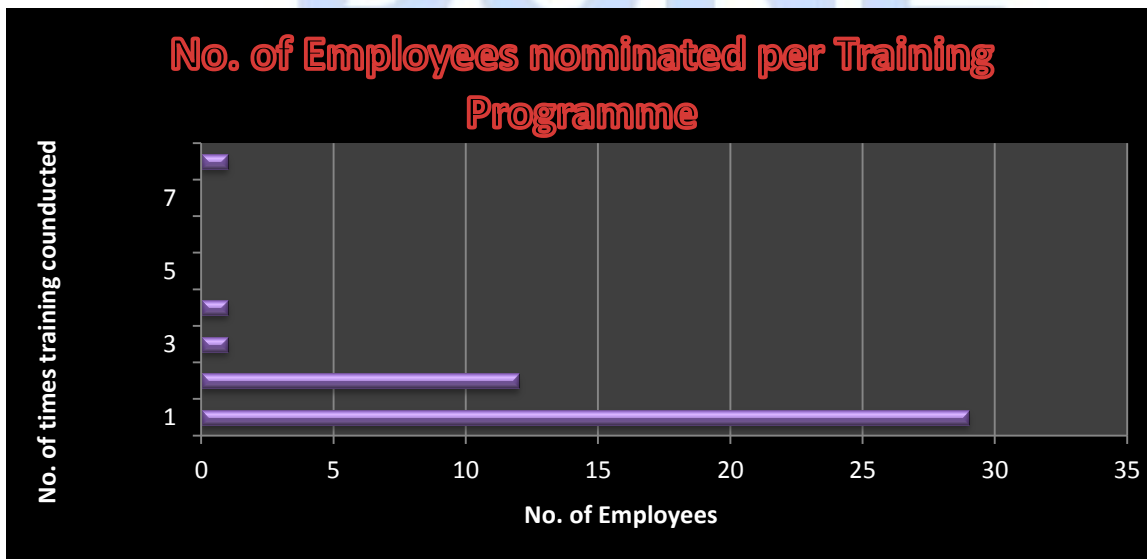

- ! Periodic performance review sessions (every three months).
- ! Bulletin boards.
- ! Suggestion boxes.
- ! Newsletters.
- ! Regular open meetings.

NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES NOMINATED PER PROGRAM :

Number of employees nominated per programme is an important indicator of the company's views towards training and development. If the company is seen to send many employees at a time to any training programme its effectiveness would be reduced and manpower shortage would be felt and important decisions would be delayed. It's also advisable that the organization should concentrate on development activities on certain categories of people to get the best results.

In BSNL the number of employees who have been nominated over the time to under go any particular training programme is always restricted to two or three senior or middle level managers. These managers can be a cross functional team or from the same department. Employees are usually nominated for training programme based on their development plan goals and based on their ability to initiate overall organizational development through using the training matters. The HR department decides what programmer or training would the employees attend and asks the respective department head to suggest names of their employees. Superiors usually nominate their team members as they are in a better position to understand their potentials and training needs. At times training needs arise due to change in law or other external factors.

NUMBER OF PROGRAMME CONDUCTED IN HOUSE OR EXTERNAL:

When planning for training and development activities one of the most important aspect under consideration is weather the training should be done in-house or should an external trainer be brought in to conduct training. In BSNL most of the training provided to management staff is behavioral and attitudinal in nature. Skill based training is also provided. Such training sessions would cover Communication skills or presentation skills. Training sessions that cover Organizational Development, Management Grid or Team roles etc. are also provided to managers. External trainers best provide such training as they have the required experience and knowledge to conduct them. On analyzing the training & development Programme of the year 2018, all the training programme that employees were sent for were, organized by external trainers. In all 33 external training institutes provided training on various topics to managers. This was done with a view to provide quality training for its employees on a array of topics.

INFERENCE FROM THE ABOVE DATA:

- Mostly the number of employees selected to attend various training programme are more than the training programmes' held.
- In the month of March , highest number of employees were selected to under go training (12)

- In the month of July and September the number of trainees and training programme went down.
- This data is useful in finding out the structure of training calendar.
- Most of the employees were nominated twice for different training programme in the same month.

CONCLUSION

1. It is concluded that BSNL have very sound procedure of training & development in their organization.
2. The company provides training to fresher as well as old employees for improving their skills confidence the and help to know new techniques.
3. Company Providers training after recruiting the person for encouraging him her.
4. Training Programmer helps employee to increase their productivity and efficiency.
5. Training help to decreases laboure turnover rate.
6. Company also held training for safely and development of employees.
7. After Providing training employee feeds comfortable adjust them self know according to changing situation.

SUGGESTION

- BSNL should develop managerial skill particularly to identify the weaker section to reach the benefits the social and economic objects.
- BSNL must play prominent role in financing which may result in rising level of income and employment.
- The present official staff of BSNL can be given a suitable management training that modern management concept and management technologies can be vitalized in the day to day business of BSNL for the further improvement.

- They should give the detail information to employees about launching of a new scheme and service by their training programmer.
- Company should apply modern latest techniques for giving training to its employees.
- Company should charge penalties on those who are not regular in attending training programmer.
- Company should adopt a good performance appraisal system so that need of further training is know.
- Company should encourage its human resources to attend training programmer which are held frequently so that they have latest knowledge and can improve their skill.
